Problems in the National Platform Implementation

Insufficiently developed system of National Emergency Monitoring, including land-space control, which causes problems in early forecasting and detection of natural hazards as well as taking timely measures for their liquidation

A range of engineering measures for response to natural hazards is being implemented in an inefficient way in connection with its high capital intensity

Plans for 2009-2011

The plan includes establishment of the rescue engineering center for civil defense force in the western region with up to 1000 people in quantity.

Regulatory and clinical framework as well as personnel potential of the accidents medicine service will be developed and strengthened in future.

The structure of permanent effective reception, processing and adjustment of land-space monitoring information is also planned to be developed in future.
