

Accomplishments in the area of linking adaptation to climate change and disaster risk reduction

The working group constituted by the erstwhile IATF has been meeting virtually. In addition to participating in the various global forums and playing an advocacy role, the working group has produced a few specific knowledge products. In the run up to the most recent UNFCCC conference of the parties, the Working Group produced a publication entitled “On better terms” explaining and clarifying some of the key terms and concepts used by the climate change and disaster reduction communities. This publication is a contribution towards fostering deeper engagement between the two communities. The working group has also produced CC+DR Infolink publication which acts as a channel of communication and information exchange between the two communities.

In addition, at the national and regional levels a number of focused initiatives are taking shape that work at the intersection of adaptation to climate change and disaster risk reduction.

Later today the Working Group will have a brainstorming session to discuss future initiatives within the ISDR system on linking disaster risk reduction and adaptation to climate change.
