EDURISK means educating about risks. Particularly seismic risks, meaning the risks that people and things are exposed to during an earthquake. EDURISK is a pilot project that outlines a number of itineraries, from the realms of research to daily life, designed to help us live with these events. "What if there's an earthquake?" is one of the tools produced by EDURISK for preschool and primary school: just one of the itineraries to reducing seismic risk. This work was partially funded by the Italian Dipartimento della Protezione Civile in the frame of the 2004-2006 Agreement with Istituto Nazionale di Geofisica e Vulcanologia - INGV.
