Millions of people are displaced each year in the context of disasters. Disaster displacement is often traumatic and worse for women, youth and children. The differing experiences and knowledge of women, youth and children are also vital resources for displacement risk reduction, preparedness for response and recovery.

In this session, two young women will share their stories of displacement. From their experiences, we will draw lessons to reduce the risk of displacement for women and youth in order to better address their specific needs during displacement.

With the generous support of:

More info at www.disasterdisplacement.org